An Open Letter

By John Middlekauff

Just what is a most valuable player? What criteria is used to select one? I'm afraid that finding exact answers to those questions would be like counting the grains of sand at the New Jersey beaches. Everyone will have his or her opinion, and that will not make them wrong if they disagree!

Since it appears that I have accidentally opened "Pandora's box" on the subject, then I suppose an explanation on my part is necessary. First of all, let me set one thing straight, I have nothing but complete admiration for young Bryce Silver. In both football and basketball this fine young man appears to give 100% everytime out. The controversy is not about Bryce, unfortunately I feel he has been somewhat victimized by the whole thing!

As first a player and as a coach I have understood that in every athletic discipline, there are a wide variety of differences each player brings to his or her sport. That is one of the beauties of athletics, the blending of individual differences for the common good- the team. There are those athletic endeavors where the one or two individuals will get a great deal of the "press", but the bottom line-to me- is how did the team do. Those of you taking the time to read this, and understand what I am trying to say, know full well what happens when a team is either built around or depends on one individual it doesn't work!

To sit down and evaluate an individual's performance can be at best a very harrowing experience. It is necessary, however, so that you can come to understand what that individual has done for the team, and whether on not that is a person the team can count on for the next campaign. Evaluating the contributions of the individual is also a barometer of the kind of coaching job that was done on that individual that particular year.

Selecting individuals for awards is a two-edged sword, for try as you may, someone, somewhere is going to be offended. There are a number of factors that go into handing out awards, and statistics are, unfortunately, the prime one. I say unfortunately, because I seem to recall a quote attributed to the Late British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli who supposedly said, "There are three kinds of lies: Lies, damned lies and statistics." But statistics must be used, because it becomes impossible to remember every little detail of every athletic contest.

Being selected as the Most Valuable Player is, in my mind, the absolute best of the best. He or she is the individual who goes out day after day doing those things that are absolutely necessary for the team to succeed. They are the individuals who provide the leadership, not just in practice sessions, but in actual competition. In looking at the final season's results, can honestly say that without that individuals enthusiasm, drive, leadership, and statistics the team would not have had the success it enjoyed. The M.V.P is the only person you want to go to in critical situations! Selecting an M.V.P. at any level is difficult! At the high school level, it has to be almost impossible.

It was never my intent to stage a protest, silent or otherwise against the awarding of the Northern Boys Basketball M.V.P. for 1989-1990. Do I think Bryce should be rewarded for his outstanding effort and contribution? Absolutely! Do I believe that he was the most valuable player on this year's varsity squad? No I do not! I believe that his effort, his contributions, etc. would have been better recognized...better appreciated by the people who count the most-himself and his teammates-if he had been presented a "team" award much the same way the wrestling squad did with the Baxter lad.

Am I setting myself up as judge and jury over Coach Tom Bemheimer? Absolutely not! I have too much respect for Tom and what he is trying to do at Northern to ever do that! I am a firm believer in athletics, especially at the high school level. It rubs me raw to hear people say that this school, or any school, is not a "football school" a "basketball school," a "wrestling school," or whatever! The success comes only when the players, coaches, and programs come together to create an atmosphere where each individual contributes his or her all for the good of the team!

I apologize to Bryce, publically, if I offended him in any way! What I wanted to do, was to downplay what I saw was a growing controversy. When I was very young, my "Mom" put a bandaid on a cut I had, and told me that she was doing it so that it would not get infected and cause more harm. I tried to put a bandaid on the M.V.P. situation.

It became a tension, when I received no less than five complete copies of the basketball team's final stats-along with a couple of unsigned notes! When I got at least three telephone calls on the subject, and when I went to the grocery store and was asked for my view on the subject! All of that before I ever wrote about the awards banquet in the first place. Perhaps it was being short-sighted, but at least I was being honest!

Finally, to the two ladies who wrote to the Banner criticizing the other articles I have written. I welcome your criticism, but question your motive! I am not a full-time employee of the Banner I hold down a full-time job and write when I can, which lately has been precious little. It is very enjoyable watching the Northern "kids" compete! I get charged up at their success, and I hurt for them when they lose. In some instances I question their "attitude" and may wonder why a coach did this or that! But all of that is done in the privacy of my own mind--not in print. My job is to report, the best I can, the outcome of the contest and focus on the individual(s) who contributed the most. In doing this, you must take in consideration that space and time are of the utmost importance. Time from a sense that since the Banner is a once-a-week paper, you don't want to report on events that took place weeks before. Space plays a huge role, because the Banner is growing. It is growing just like the community is growing! But the paper is more than just a sports paper. As it strives to cover all community events, it can allow only so much space for each article. Under those restraints, I try to report what appears to be the most important. My job, as I understand it, is to be brief if possible, and honest. It is not my job to provide an ego trip for anyone parental or otherwise!

Tour de Trump brings international flair to Wellsville

Lead by Andy Bishop of the United States, one hundred twenty cyclists from around the world raced through Wellsville this past Tuesday afternoon on their way to Harrisburg during the seventh stage of the Tour de Trump.

Donald Snellbaker of Pennsylvania Realty Wellsville, hosted a Tour de Trump party to cheer the cyclists on their way to Harrisburg, a little over half way mark on the 1,107-mile tour.

Onlookers lined the streets cheering on the cyclists which had come from Winchester, Virginia. This particular stage of the 1,107-mile tour was 142 miles.

Not only did over 100 cyclists fly by, but so did 110 vehicles carrying team support personnel, judges, medical support, technical support, journalists and race staff.

The townspeople's support was acknowledged by enthusiastic hand waving and horn beeping by team support personnel which traveled in the race caravan consisting of over one hundred motorcylists and vans.

The town also received official Tour de Trump t-shirts.

Youth Challenge

Following the induction phase of Youth Challenge Outreach for Men, the students have training available to them in auto body, printing, or Bible at Youth Challenge International.

The overall international Youth Challenge ministry is a non-profit religious-oriented rehabilitation program for drug addicts, alcoholics and other troubled youths with life-controlling problems. It has launched a campaign across the United States to aid youth in a moral and spiritual renewal.

The Rev. David Wilkerson, author of The Cross and the Switchblade, is the founder of Youth Challenge International Bible Institute. This sixteen-million-copy best seller has been translated into forty languages and was made a feature-length movie starring Pat Boone and Eric Estrada.

Rev. Robert A. McDonald will be introducing Rev. Pat Owens and "The Warriors of Truth."

West Shore Symphony to perform
